

PSHE:

Discrete lessons are taught across both upper and lower school, averaging out to half an hour weekly. These are delivered through a mixture of short slots or longer blocked units, as suited to the particular theme and its relationship to other learning. Every opportunity to link PSHE to other topics is used to widen the children's depth and understanding of themselves and others.